

Through Georgia State University (GSU) Department of Religious Studies required internship Rels 6400 a proposal was submitted to GSU Student Innovative Fellow (SIF). The "Dream Machine," a mobile-first website for homeless and at risk-youth began as a research proposal for the Georgia State University Student Innovative Fellow (SIF) program as a component in the required internship course in the MA in Religious Studies and Concentration in Nonprofit Management program. The SIF fellowship is an example of the opportunities available for students to apply their training in religious studies to create practical solutions to real life problems. The student worked closely with her advisor during the internship and SIF project, and she kept the department Chair up to speed as the website work progressed. If you would like additional information about GSU's Religious Studies department, please visit religiousstudies.gsu.edu or email Dr. Molly Bassett at mbassett@gsu.edu.